Purple Martin
Conservation Association®

We hope you are as excited as we are here at the PMCA — the Purple Martins soon will be migrating north to our welcoming colony sites!

In your hand, you have our newest supply catalog, full of quality Purple Martin housing and accessories, along with martin gifts and specialty products.

Please know that we — and our beloved Purple Martins — appreciate your business. When you buy from the PMCA, you're not only getting a product to enjoy, but you're investing in the future of Purple Martins by helping us fund vital education, conservation and research efforts. Thank you for your support!

How to Help

Purple Martin populations are undergoing long-term declines in many parts of North America. As a non-profit organization, the PMCA works to increase populations through education and research but we need your help!

Quick Release Pole Guards (QRG)

Recommended for easier nest checks, pole guard can be removed in seconds!

Finally, an ingenious design solves the problem of using a pole guard without interfering with lowering martin housing.

Top of guard should be 4' off of the ground.

- Cable notch and vinyl-edged rope hole
- Aluminum, 8" diameter, 24" long
- Piano hinge and latch system
- Attaches and removes quickly while housing remains installed
- See-through tops to confuse predators

QRG

Pole Guards (GUARD)

Protect birds from raccoons and snakes with economical pole guard. Installs easily, no need to remove housing from pole.

- 24" long, 8" diameter
- Aluminum baffle suspends from a bracket and top plate
- Smooth surface and wobbling motion keeps climbing predators out of housing
- Rustproof stainless steel hardware
- See-through tops to confuse predators

Predator Protection

Predator guards should be installed on ALL active housing. Wood or metal poles of any size are easily climbed by snakes, raccoons, and squirrels. Pole guards are commercially available, but landlords can also make their own. The top of the pole guard should be at least 4' above ground. If it's lower, large raccoons and snakes may bypass the guard. Aerial predators like hawks, owls, and crows commonly raid martin housing. Conventional 6" x 6" compartments do not offer much protection from these predators, who can reach nestlings in shallow rooms. Larger compartments will allow martins to build their nests further from the entrance, and out of a predator's reach. All housing—even housing with deep compartments—should be equipped with an external owl guard. If commercial guards are not available, landlords can fasten hardware cloth (2" x 4" wire fencing) to the outside of the house or gourd rack, creating a protective cage that can be removed for nest checks and monitoring.

Oyster Shells (OYSTER)

Provide calcium for your martins with Oyster Shells.

Crushed oyster shells are very beneficial to Purple Martins, providing calcium for strong egg shells and strong bones as nestlings grow. Have oyster shells available to martins throughout nesting season. For safety from predators, feed oyster shells in an elevated feeder or tray. Crushed shells are an ideal size for adult and nestling martins.

Weather can play a large factor in the year-to-year success of the Purple Martin population. Since martins are aerial insectivores—they catch all of their insects in flight—they are extremely vulnerable to weather conditions such as excessive cold, heat, or drought. Supplemental feeding with mealworms during times of prolonged cold or weather can help save your colony. Visit purplemartin.org for more information on supplemental feeding.

Purple Martin Identification

Adult Male

Adult males are the only Purple Martins to have iridescent, purple feathers covering the entire body. They do not get their full plumage until the 3rd calendar year. Undertail coverts—solid purple.

Adult Female

Adult females have more purple on their head and back than subadult females. They will not have any purplish feathers on their chest, belly, or undertail. Undertail coverts—can vary, much darker than subadults—all brown/taupe feathers with a white rim on the outer edge.

Subadult Male

Often the hardest to identify, will have at least one, but usually many solid-purple feathers either on their chins, throats, bellies, or undertails. Undertail coverts—can vary greatly, some will have several purple feathers, others few.

Subadult Female

Subadult females have a much lighter purple to brownish color on their back feathers. Undertail coverts—may vary greatly, all white or light-colored feathers with brown pinstripes down the center.

Hatching Year

The sex of a hatching year or juvenile bird cannot be determined by sight. Hatching year Purple Martins will have a stubby tail—shorter than the wing feathers. They are a dull brownish-grey color and still have yellow inside their beak.

Native Species

Eastern Bluebirds, Tree Swallows, House Wrens, Barn Swallows

If any of these native species try to nest in your martin housing, close it and put up a nestbox or gourd with a 1½" entrance (see page 26 for housing), placed about 30–50' from your martin housing. House Wrens use a 1" entrance. Do not close housing if they have eggs or nestlings. Re-open the martin housing once the new housing has been accepted by the competitor. Barn Swallows nest under roofs or eaves and will not compete for nest cavities.

Non-Native Species

House Sparrows and European Starlings

Both the House Sparrow and European Starling are non-native species and should never be permitted to nest in martin housing. They will take over martin compartments, destroy eggs, and kill nestlings. They can also prevent martins from nesting and often injure or kill adults. Successful martin landlords do not tolerate these non-native competitors. Starlings and House Sparrows are not protected and may be legally controlled by trapping, shooting. Baited traps work best when food is scarce, but can be used all year.

Purple Martin Imposters

These birds are often mistaken for Purple Martins. Barn Swallows and Tree Swallows are in the same family as the Purple Martin. Tree Swallows are smaller with a snow-white belly and an iridescent greenish/blue back. They will nest in bluebird boxes or gourds and sometimes take over martin housing. Tree Swallows line their nests with feathers; Purple Martins use green leaves. Barn Swallows are smaller, have deeply forked tails and orange breasts. They build mud cup nests in barns, sheds, or on porches. European Starlings are larger than a martin and have a long yellow beak. If you see a 'Purple Martin' at your birdfeeders or feeding on the ground, it's probably a starling.
